The effort moved forward despite an emotional daylong debate that threatened to derail bipartisan negotiations on the legislation, which calls for an overhaul of the 13-year-old law that now accounts for one of the biggest challenges to efforts to reform the legal immigration system and economy. The bill, which deals with border security, agriculture, employment verification, asylum and visas, was introduced in January by Representative Lamar Smith, Republican of Texas, who led the hearings on the bill with three Democrats, Jack Kingston of Georgia, Zoe Lofgren of California and Zoe Lofgren
