How to open and install GTA San Andreas Game on Psp Gta San Andreas Ps2Oxidized low density lipoprotein down-regulates the LFA-1 adhesion molecule, and inhibits phagocytosis by human granulocytes. Oxidized LDL has been shown to be phagocytosed by human monocytes at a rate that is approximately 10% that of native LDL. Because LFA-1 is the ligand for the phagocytic signal of the formyl peptide receptor, down-regulation of its expression on the monocyte surface after phagocytosis of LDL was assessed. LDL, which is oxidized in vitro by Cu(II) with a kinetics similar to that of monocyte uptake, inhibited phagocytosis of the bacterium Escherichia coli (E. coli) in a dose-dependent manner. Treatment of purified LDL with Fe(III), which causes LDL oxidation and monocyte uptake, inhibited phagocytosis at a significantly lower concentration than Cu(II). Further studies of this effect showed that monocytes oxidized by Fe(III) acquired an ability to inhibit phagocytosis, and that this inhibition was due to the induction of a regulatory factor in the monocytes. Phagocytosis of E. coli by human granulocytes also was reduced by the oxidized LDL. Similar to the effect on monocyte uptake, the inhibitory effect was greatest when LDL was oxidized by Cu(II). These results indicate that oxidized LDL, in addition to its uptake by monocytes, inhibits phagocytosis of bacteria in host cells. It appears that, upon its uptake, oxidation of LDL may inhibit phagocytosis by granulocytes, monocytes, and possibly other cells, 0cc13bf012
