About the artist:Sixto Rodriguez, also known as RodrÃ¡guez is an American folk musician from Detroit, Michigan. Rodriguez released the solo album Cold Fact on the Sussex label in 1970. The original vinyl record was reissued by Century Media in 2001, and a remastered version was released on cd by Broderick Records in 2006. Besides the title song, the album is notable for a version of Sam Cooke's "A Change is Gonna Come" that Rodriguez later recorded as a duet with friend and singer-guitarist John McLaughlin. According to MetalSucks.com, Rodriguez was shot and killed in February 1994, in the stairwell of the apartment building where he lived with his wife and two sons. The name "Rodriguez" is the Spanish pronunciation of the name "Rodrigue," a French family name meaning "little rod." While most of the Rodriguez brothers' acts sound like garage rockers and the 1950s easy-listening sound of Herb Alpert and the Tijuana Brass, with the collaboration of such musicians as the early 1970s punk pioneer John Doe, the family unit seems to have a healthy respect for the rock 'n' roll tradition.
