In particular, in certain environments there is a need to improve the efficiency and overall performance of a transceiver for a wireless communication device. Communication devices are typically held in a user's hand and operated in close proximity to the user's body. As a result, a user's hand is an antenna that receives and radiates electromagnetic radiation from a transmitter. At the same time, the body of a user is typically shielded from the electromagnetic radiation that is radiated from the user's hand. However, due to the proximity of a user's hand to the body of the user, the user's hand can affect the radiated signals being transmitted by a transmitter. Thus, the transmitter may interfere with communications with the user's hand and/or body. Communication

We Love Your Style We Love Your Style is the eighth studio album by the American rock band Puddle of Mudd. It was released on May 27, 2008, through MCA Records. The album debuted on the Billboard 200 at No. 75, and produced three singles. Production and recording The album was produced and engineered by John Alagia at Studio X in Malibu, California, and executive produced by Puddle of Mudd's lead singer Wes Scantlin. The album was also recorded at The Panda Studios in Los Angeles, California and produced by Wes Scantlin. The band had begun writing for We Love Your Style in 2004, but it was not until the band decided to refocus their efforts on the album in late 2007 that they began the process of recording and mixing the album. Scantlin stated that this album was not a heavy metal album, stating "We don't want to be a caricature of what we think we're not. We want to present a legitimate band that can stand on its own." Scantlin described the album as a "rock album" that would have a variety of sounds. For example, the song "Forever With You" has a fast melody and a hard groove. "Able To Dream" is the band's first song written in a major key instead of the typical "home base" minor key. Critical reception The album received mixed reviews from critics upon its release. Bill Lamb of About.com gave the album three out of five stars, praising the songs "Wipe That Bitch Off My Shoes" and "It's Easy to Go Blind", but he criticized "Lay It All Down" as "one of the weakest" songs on the album. Dean Brown of 411mania.com gave the album a positive review, praising the album's variety in sound and Scantlin's vocal performance. He stated "Puddle of Mudd now sounds as fresh and dangerous as ever in their new hard rock sound. With a bit more polish than previous records, We Love Your Style is another great album in the band's long and expansive career."
